

Lukashina Elena V.

teacher of faculty of global studies, Lomonosov State university

Course: “Contemporary relations between youth and religious organizations” (72 h)

Annotation:

This course aims to acquaint students with different forms of interaction between religious organizations and young people in the global world. It is supposed to examine the main trends in the youth and the religious policy of the largest countries in the world, analyze their points of intersection. Great importance is scientific understanding of the principles and attitudes of religious policy pursued by international organizations. The course is innovative, students will be expand their understanding of the problem of relations between youth and religious organizations, and use of interactive forms of training. They take part in shaping the current agenda within the designated problem.